WINE OF NEW ZEALAND

Kiwi Entrepreneur Goes Global

Avocado oil pioneer Chris Nathan now living in the South of France has turned his hand to making and blending wine the Kiwi way. He's not claiming to be a qualified wine maker but years of collecting and drinking New Zealand's finest wines, he knows what he likes, what sells and what doesn't. Working with local masters using traditional French techniques he will create antipodean style wines from new plantings of grapes in the Languedoc region.

The "Pukeko Bend" label recently launched in the UK with quality NZ wines in a new 250ml PET bottle will soon be joined by its French cousin Pukeko Bend "The Big OE". Follow the Pukeko's travels as he sources fine wines from France and further abroad.

A newly formed venture www.kiwicuisine.co.uk that imports a range of pure NZ products will be the sole distributor in the UK and will handle exports to the USA, Australia, Japan and China.
